

Searching for the Great Hopewell Road DVD Order Form

Searching for the Great Hopewell Road explores new research into the monumental earthworks of the ancient Hopewell people who flourished in the central Ohio Valley over two thousand years ago. Based on the research of Dr. Bradley Lepper, Curator of Archaeology, Ohio Historical Society, the one-hour documentary examines evidence the Hopewell may have built a straight, wide, sixty-mile road between their two greatest cultural centers near present day Newark and Chillicothe, Ohio. Dr. Lepper's investigation serves as a case study for a broader look at the different ways in which archaeologists, historians and Native Americans interpret the past.
